Main Bio

As Co-Chair of the Renewable Energy Industry Group and Co-Chair of the Environmental & Natural Resources Practice Group, Chris Colyer utilizes his unique combined environmental, real estate and land use, and administrative law experience to assist clients with the development, acquisition, permitting, financing, and operation of renewable energy, industrial, commercial, and residential projects in Arizona and the western United States.

Chris' renewable energy practice includes representing clients with the development, siting, financing, and permitting of utility-scale solar and wind facilities, renewable natural gas and hydrogen projects, and related infrastructure on public, private and tribal lands. His environmental practice includes advising clients on complex environmental issues associated with real estate and corporate transactions and representing clients in federal, state, and local permitting matters, including air quality, hazardous waste, water quality, underground storage tank, and Superfund compliance.

Chris' real estate, land use, and administrative law practice includes representing large and medium-sized companies with municipal zoning approvals, liquor licensing, and other state and local governmental permitting issues. Chris also advises clients regarding compliance with federal and state advertising and marketing laws.
